Rockville dentists encourage young parents to bring their babies in for their first dental checkup at approximately six months of age. Many parents are unaware that overexposure to sugared drinks (including milk) in baby bottles can trigger tooth decay in unerupted teeth. Your Rockville dentist will insist that you never put your baby to bed with anything but water in her baby bottle.

When you visit a Rockville dentist for the first time, expect to receive a thorough oral and dental examination, prophylactic cleaning and fluoride treatment, along with digital xrays that will uncover early decay, tumors or other forms of oral disease. The oral examination itself will consist of a visual check of your mouth, tongue and throat for signs of cancer. Digital xrays are popular with Rockville dentists, as they use 90 percent less radiation than the traditional radiographic process and do not require toxic chemicals for development.
