

Importance Of Dog Breeds

Dog is a faithful animal and it can be used for various purposes therefore, people are always curious to know about the dog breeds. Different dog breeds are associated with different ancestral lines. Some dog breeds are natural while selective dog breeding is also carried out for getting the excellent dog breeds. For many years, the selective breeding of dog has been carried out to get the desired dog breeds. In the selective breeding the same ancestral lines can be bred and sometimes different ancestral lines are bred. In the same ancestral breeding, the same dog breeds mate to reproduce the offspring of the same line.

For enhancing the features of a specific breed, different combination of dog breeds are bred. Therefore, dog breeds originate because of the selective dog breeding. The characteristics, nature and functions of a specific breed can be totally different as compare to the other dog breeds.

All dog breeds are recorded in three categories which include registered dog breeds, rare dog breeds and new dog breeds. The dog breeds are generally categorized on the basis of their functions and there are seven types of dog breeds including Companion dogs, Guard dogs, Hunting dogs, Pastoral dogs, Sled dogs, Extinct dogs, Hypoallergenic breeds and Police dog breeds.

A companion dog is a pet and it is not used for work or specific tasks. Most of the people keep them as hobby or for pleasure and these dogs are friendly by nature.

The dogs which are aimed to provide safety against the unwanted people are known as guard dogs. This dog breed has the feature that they bark to make the owner alert and active. These dogs are trained to attack the suspicious people. The dog breed which is used for hunting purposes is known as hunting dog breed. These dogs are further categorized as hounds, terriers and gun dogs.

The pastoral dog breed include the dogs to work livestock. One very useful type of dog breeds is the Sled dog breed which is used for pulling the wheel less pastoral dog breed. The dog species which do not longer exist are known as extinct dog breeds. Hypoallergenic dog breeds are also known as crossbreeds that are specifically bred for the individuals who have allergic issues. The dog breed which is used for the investigative and detective purposes by the police forces is known as Police dog breed.

Therefore, in order to achieve the above functional categories of dog breeds, proper breeding is carried out and special trainings are given to the dogs.
